Biographies:

Dr Jon Murray

Jonathan is a consultant nephrologist at South Tees Hospitals NHS Foundation Trust and leads the regional Acute Kidney Injury (AKI) programme for the North East and North Cumbria Academic Health Science Network. He led and delivered an award winning secondary care AKI quality improvement programme within these roles, and his team were also highly commended at the National Patient Safety Awards in 2017. More recently he has focused upon safe and quality AKI care across primary-secondary care interfaces. He led production of a primary care tailored AKI educational resource working within the "Think Kidneys" intervention work-stream. He currently works within the national "Think Kidneys" managerial board, where he is responsible for ensuring AKI resources are maintained up to date. He is also co-leading national quality improvement projects in collaboration with the Royal College of General Practitioners and is an associate clinical researcher at Newcastle University.
